

Molly Murray

SENIOR ASSOCIATE

As a senior associate for HCM Strategists' health innovation team, Molly Murray is dedicated to ensuring all people have access to high-quality and affordable health care. Molly uses her expertise in advocacy and strategy to support the All of Us project for National Institutes of Health, combat the opioid crisis with Braeburn, and increase access to care with Planned Parenthood.

Prior to her work with HCM, Molly worked at the Wisconsin Primary Health Care Association, a member-association of Wisconsin's Community Health Centers. In this role, she partnered with providers and organizations to ensure access to high-quality care for all patients, regardless of their ability to pay, and provided resources on policy analysis, data and reporting, project management, telehealth and more.

In a previous role, Molly worked at Epic, an electronic health record (EHR) company, helping large hospital systems implement software. This experience allowed her to gain operational experience and practical understanding of the many complexities of health care. Additionally, she learned the challenges—and helped develop solutions—for sharing health data and the importance of interoperability for high quality care.

Molly is currently pursuing a master's in public administration from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a 2010 graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where she majored in political science. She worked on many local campaigns during her time there and was a delegate at the Democratic National Convention in 2008.

Molly is originally from a small town in western Massachusetts, and she currently lives in the Adams Morgan neighborhood of Washington, D.C. with a wonderful golden doodle named Calvin.
